Russia won't stop nuclear sale

IP IN ARMS: Russian officials told U.S. Defense Secretary Villiam Perry they would continue with a plan to sell nuclear reacors to Iran. President Boris Yeltsin is shown here addressing the lussian parliament Feb. 16. His government says Iran will not be ble to use the reactors for any weapons purpose.

U.S. not confident in Russia preventing weapon use in Iran

MOSCOW — Russia rejected a U.S. request Monday to abandon a planned sale of nuclear reactors to Iran and said it might take "countermeasures" if NATO expanded east toward Russia.

After a full day of meetings with top government officials, Defense Secretary William Perry told reporters he had failed to persuade the Russians that selling the reactors would enhance Iran's efforts to acquire nuclear weapons.

Perry said Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin assured him his government would see to it that Iran did not use the reactors for any nuclear weapons purpose.

"I told him I do not share that confidence," Perry told a news confer-

Gen. Pavel Grachev, the defense minister, told reporters after meeting with Perry that Russia might be compelled to take "countermeasures" if NATO expanded its 16nation membership to include Eastern European countries on Russia's borders.

For the past few years Russia has sought unsuccessfully to persuade Washington to agree to amend the conventional forces treaty to permit Russia to deploy more forces near its southern borders with Muslim states. The Russians say they perceive a significant threat from Muslim fundamentalism in that area.

Russia might also seek intensified military coordination among the states of the former Soviet Union, Grachev said without elaborating. He said U.S. support for expanding NATO is one reason for "the pause in relations" between Moscow and Washington.

Asked about Grachev's remark, Perry said that "NATC poses no threat to Russia or any other country" and that any expansion of the alliance would not happen quickly. No Eastern European country has been invited to join, although many

Government buying dollars as currency markets hit low

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration intervened on foreign currency markets to buy dollars today as the U.S. currency hit another postwar low against the Japanese yen.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin announced a dollar-buying effort in a brief statement that provided no details about how much in resources were used.

"We acted in the exchange markets overnight out of concern with recent movements in exchange rates," Rubin

The Treasury secretary repeated past assurances that the administration "believes a strong dollar is in America's interests and we remain committed to strengthening the fundamentals that are ultimately important to maintain a strong and stable cur-

Lower interest rates in Germany in comparison to the United States would normally have the effect of making the dollar stronger against the German mark, because foreign investors would be more inclined to hold dollars in order to get a higher rate of return.

Germany's rate cuts on Thursday failed to have any long-term impact as the dollar came under renewed pressure on Friday, setting another record low against the Japanese yen and falling close to the all-time low against the German mark.

Rubin has urged restraint in dealing with the current dollar crisis. He has argued that it was essential for the administration to focus on promoting a strong U.S. economy and that, in time, this would do more to bolster the dollar's standing than any temporary intervention effort.

Utah minorities to be recruited as Democratic delegates this year

By MARGRETA SUNDELIN Universe Staff Writer

In an attempt to create a more representative group of delegates for Democratic National Convention, the Utah State Democratic Party has presented a new selection plan with an affirmative-action twist.

The Utah State Delegate Selection and Affirmative Action Plan for the 1996 Democratic National Convention was presented by the party administration last week. The selection plan traditionally outlines requirements for individuals who seek to become delegates. It is also created to formalize the guidelines that the Utah State Democratic Party must follow throughout the selection process

This year's 30-page plan also provides for the appointment of a ninemember Affirmative Action Committee. According to Todd Taylor, the executive director of the Utah State Democratic Party, the committee was designed to provide greater equality in delegate selec-

"It is designed to make additional outreach attempts into the underrepresented minority communities,"

The mission statement of the committee, which is included in the plan, says the committee members will seek "to make the delegate selection process accessible to all Utah Democrats." This, according to Taylor, will mean spreading the delegate positions proportionally between men and women as well as between the different racial and eth-

The proposed Affirmative Action Committee, however, is not the original work of the Utah State Democratic Party. Taylor said that National Democratic Party adopted such committee proposals in the days of George McGovern and has since urged each state to adopt Taylor said the committee's proposals set an example the nation could learn from, especially in light of the current national debate that surrounds federal affirmative-action

"I think that the national committee's policies could do a considerable amount of good in helping us to resolve the current debate," Taylor said.

The state of Utah will be allowed to send 30 delegates to the National Democratic Convention May 10 and 11, 1996.

Family science chair to speak on practical living

By THIRA SCHMIDL Universe Staff Writer

"To Walk in the Light," will be the topic of the address given by Professor Terrance D. Olson, chair of BYU's Department of Family Sciences, at the Devotional Assembly Tuesday at 11 a.m., in the Marriott Center.

"People often hold the beliefs of the gospel in a way that discounts them being practical," Olson said.

Olson will talk about what it means to take life seriously and live by the knowledge and understanding one has. "Being true to the light within us is a realistic way to live happily — it is not just theory, "If we are true to the little things in life we will be also true to the big things, and the same is true for the opposite,' He said it is possible to walk in the light rather

At least 150 dead in Burundi massacre

BUJUMBURA, Burundi — Hundreds of Hutus, mostly women and children, were massacred in northeastern Burundi by attackers who shot or bludgeoned them to death, the U.S. ambassador said Monday.

At least 150 people were killed between Wednesday and Friday in the village of Gasorwe, but the death toll for the entire region over the past two weeks could be as high as 450 people, said Ambassador Robert Krueger.

Krueger said that on Saturday he toured hospitals and talked with parents of children who had been beaten to death.

"I have no explanation for why people would beat children's heads with clubs," the ambassador said Monday. "How can you explain something like that? But that is what I saw, children who had their heads beaten in.'

Survivors in Gasorwe, which is about 70 miles northeast of the capital of Bujumbura, indicated the attackers wore army uniforms, according to Krueger. Since independence in 1962, the Hutus and Tutsis have periodically slaughtered each other in their struggle for control of Burundi, a small Central African nation that neighbors Rwanda.

Provo man caught digging up dad's grave

Police apprehended a Provo man Sunday at the city cemetery after they had been informed the man was digging up his dead father's grave, Police Capt. George Pierpont said.

Pierpont said the man has a mental condition for which he has been prescribed medication.

The man apparently has not been faithful in taking his medication, Pierpont said after filing the report.

Police learned the man was trying to dig up his dead father's remains after family members became concerned about his whereabouts and called the police, according to police reports.

Capt. Pierpont said the man had nearly reached his father's casket by the time police arrived on the scene and stopped the digging.

Police arrested the man and said he has been charged with criminal mischief and criminal trespass.

Russians require AIDS test for visitors

MOSCOW — Travelers going to Russia for more than 90 days will have to prove they don't have AIDS, under a law signed Monday by President Boris Yeltsin. Foreign residents who test positive will be deported.

The measure, which takes effect Aug. 1, also requires mandatory AIDS tests for prison inmates and some Russian workers.

The new law expands the numbers of foreigners to be covered by Soviet-era legislation that required mandatory testing for some foreign residents, notably African students. About 400 foreigners infected with HIV have been deported since the old law took effect in 1990.

But the new law makes no provision for carrying out AIDS tests, prompting fear and frustration among the thousands of foreigners who live in the Russian capital. Kevin Gardner, an advisor to the World Health Organization, said the law would be "a bureaucratic nightmare."

Utahns don't like Clinton, favor Hatch

SALT LAKE CITY — Conservative Utahns are consistent, if not predictable. They didn't like Bill Clinton in 1992 and now, just past the middle of his first term as president, they still don't like him.

The latest Deseret News-KSL poll showed that 52 percent of Utahns strongly or somewhat disapprove of the Arkansas Democrat's performance in the White House. Just 42 percent give the president a positive job-approval rating.

The copyright poll was published Sunday and conducted by Dan Jones & Associates. Jones interviewed 607 Utahns March 28 and 29. The poll has a margin of error of plus-or-minus 4 percent.

The poll found that Sen. Orrin Hatch, now a leading player in the new Republican-controlled Senate, has soared in his approval ratings and is the most popular Utah politician in Washington.

In descending order, the next most popular federal politicians were Rep. Bill Orton, Sen. Bob Bennett, Rep. Jim Hansen and Rep. Enid Waldholtz.

Fully 78 percent of those asked approved of Hatch's performance, with only 15 percent saying they disapproved and 7 percent with no opinion.

Salt Lake's mail delivery among best in nation

Nearly nine out of 10 letters are delivered on time in Salt Lake City, according to an independent survey conducted by Price Waterhouse.

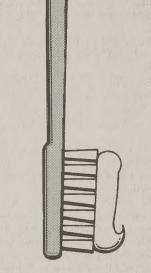

Results were taken from a period spanning from mid-December 1994 to mid-March 1995 in which Salt Lake ranked in the top 12 cities across the nation with an 89 percent score. Ninety-six cities were tested for overnight first-class mail delivery.

'Salt Lake City is consistently among the leaders in the nation for mail service," said Ralph Hamilton, Salt Lake City postmaster. The success of this service is due to the outstanding employees in Salt Lake City,

Even though the Final Four teams were all teams ranked highly by both the coaches and sportswriters polls, the number of upsets in the first and second rounds proves only that mediocre teams can find enough adrenaline at crunch time to defeat a giant.

The first rounds of the NCAA basketball tournament always provide excitement. In fact, the possibility that an unranked underdog may defeat a national powerhouse has always fueled the tournament and made it one of the most closely scrutinized sporting events in America. It is truly enjoyable to witness a Cinderella team's miracle exploits, but if they do end up winning the whole thing, do they really deserve to be national champions?

Take for example the 1983 winners, North Carolina State. Going into the tournament, they were not ranked in either the AP or UPI polls. Their record was 17 wins and 11 losses, but they defeated No. 3-ranked Maryland to win the ACC tournament final and therefore a birth in the NCAA tournament. "The selection committee realized that it was absurd that one of the top three teams in the nation loses an overtime game to a team which two weeks later won the national championship," said Billy Packer, basketball analyst for CBS sports.

N.C. State's athletic director, Willis Casey, even petitioned for the addition of more teams to the tournament after his school had won. "Let's get the best teams in the country to be involved," he said. Today, the best teams are involved, yet they are still dropping overtime games to fluky Cinderella schools. In this year's tournament for example, No. 9-ranked Villanova lost in the first round to unranked and unheard of Old Dominion. Like N. C. State, Old Dominion entered the tournament on the virtue of their win in their conference tournament. No. 12-ranked Purdue lost in the first round to Memphis, a highly praised school by coaches that never really got it together in the regular season. The two biggest upsets occurred when No. 17-ranked Oklahoma lost to Manhattan and No. 15ranked Arizona lost to Miami of Ohio. Sports analysists all over the country criticized the selection of both of these teams for the NCAA tournament. Manhattan entered the tournament at the exception of Georgia Tech, a school that received 10 votes to be in the AP Top 25.

This Cinderella spoof entered close to Utah homes when Weber State knocked off No. 11-ranked Michigan State in the first round. It was great for everyone in the state to see a local school gain some national attention, but it was hard to see them lose by a last second buzzer-beater to Georgetown. Obviously, Michigan State was a better team. They had a better record against harder opponents, but their national championship hopes ended thanks to a small Utah school.

The NCAA needs to adapt its system to ensure that good teams have an adequate chance to prove themselves. College basketball is the only sport besides football that decides its champion based on a single game. A best of three, five or seven series would better determine the national college basketball champion. In addition, it's great to have Cinderella teams in the tournament, but let those teams play that have played hard all year, not just at the season-ending tournaments.

A rankings system that compares regular season performances is needed to ensure that the best 64 teams are the only ones to enter the tournament. Five teams receiving votes to be in the top 25 were not included in the NCAA tournament this year. If the goal of the NCAA tournament is to decide the national champion, the selection committee must assure this instead of assuring revenue like it does now.

Concealed gun restrictions not answer to violent crime

By David Reyes-Cairo

n response to an editorial that appeared in the Daily Universe and various letters on Lthe topic of gun control, I would like to add my comments in favor of the bill that recently passed in the Utah State Legislature regarding concealed carry gun permits.

Many people are unaware that the only change this brings about is to drop the compelling need clause in the old law. This means that a citizen no longer has to prove anything as far as his immediate personal danger or vulnerability, but that the state, in order to deny a permit, must prove his ineligibility due to a felony record or other truly negative history. To clarify a point people seem to be unsure of, all applicants will still have to fulfill the gun safety education requirement, undergo a background check and meet all other previously existing requirements. This provides a reasonable assurance that a permit will not be given to an ineligible person.

We must keep in mind, however, that a criminal will carry a concealed weapon whenever he chooses and will not apply for a permit. The easing of the requirements for a permit will now help place more honest citizens on a more even playing field with criminal predators. We need never fear an honest citizen with a gun. There are literally thousands of examples (some studies place it in the millions) where crimes have been stopped by people who legally carry or possess a weapon for the defense of self and others.

For those who fear that a proliferation of gun-toting members of society will only increase violent crimes, we need merely to observe the results of similar laws in other states. Since Florida enacted a concealedcarry law several years ago, their violent crime rate has dropped steadily, beating the national average, which has risen over the same period. In Kennesaw, Ga., a law was enacted that requires every head of household to keep some type of firearm and ammunition in the home. Their burglary, rape, robbery and other crime statistics dropped immediately and remained low after the previous upward climb. Kennesaw's occurrence of firearms-related accidents in the home is virtually nonexistent, perhaps due to their education program.

Several other examples of this nature could be cited which contrast starkly with the constant rise in violent crimes for areas with strict gun control laws or bans, such as

California, District of Columbia, Detroit, Chicago, etc. "More guns" does not equal more crime.' Effective gun control is an oxymoron, or, at best, a myth. Even those few controls with which I agree, such as instant background checks (no waiting period!) have no measurable effect on crime. The damage that gun control does to honest, self-defenders far outweighs any ben-

If you don't believe it, do some research. Get your information from reliable sources, not just from the evening news or from President Clinton, who are heavily slanted against private gun ownership. Daniel Poulsby wrote an excellent treatise on gun control in the March 1994 issue of Atlantic Monthly called "The False Promise of Gun Control." Also, Wayne LaPierre's book, "Guns, Crime and Freedom" or A.P. Thomas' "Crime and the Sacking of America" are fine sources. Noted criminologist Gary Kleck has also written numerous articles on the futility and negative effects of gun control laws Study both sides of the issue and don't rely on others' knee-jerk reactions. The BYU Bookstore and library have these publica-

We must be careful how we deal with the right to keep and bear arms. I applaud the Utah Legislature's efforts to allow honest, law-abiding citizens an opportunity to protect themselves as they see fit.

Piercing not a rebellion

To the Editor:

I cannot believe that an objection to men wearing earrings is that "In my experience in California in the '60s and '70s, when a man had an earring it was a clear indication of homosexuality." Besides the obvious homophobia, times change. My mom tells me that when she was young, when women wore earrings it was a clear indication that they were prostitutes.

I'm from a different generation than you. When I see a guy with an earring I see a guy with an earring. When I get back from a mission I'm going to get my ear pierced. I hope that by then BYU will have seen the pointlessness of their rule, but if they haven't, I just won't wear it where it's not

I don't want an earring because I want to rebel. It isn't rebellion anymore. Just look at the real world. I want one because it's a look I like and it is the image I want to portray. Body piercing is not rebellion. It's an image, just like clothing and hair. Sam Brunson

Tickets can save lives

To the Editor:

I recently saw a poster which encouraged me to vote Dave Bjarnason for SAC. The poster says that Dave has a vision to "reign in unreasonable BYU policies such as the issuing of parking tickets on Sundays.

Perhaps Dave does not realize that one of the reasons for giving parking tickets is to make sure emergency vehicles will have access to firehydrants and buildings in an emergency. Buildings can, in fact burn on Sundays, and I would not be inclined to call a policy which is designed to save lives "unreasonable."

Gump story amusing

To the Editor:

I was most amused by a March 29 story concerning student opinions of the movie "Forrest Gump." The informal survey quot-ed in the article states that "five respondants would not recommend [Forrest Gump] to a friend while 27 people would not recommend it to a general authority ...

This seems to suggest that there are 22 students who would recommend this movie to a friend, but not to a general authority. Does this tell us something about how we view our friends, or is it indicative of our perception of general authorities? Nathan Terry

Tradition of graduation costumes symbolizes academic achievement

By TONYA HARRIS Universe Staff Writer

The medieval tradition of scholars wearing gowns remained prevalent throughout the centuries, up to future BYU graduates getting ready for April commencement exercises.

HISTORY "The history of academic dress dates to the early days of the oldest universities," according to History of the Academic Costume. "In England, in the second half of the 14th century, the statute of certain colleges forbade excess in apparel' and prescribed the wearing of a long gown. America has continued the legacy. "In the United States, as a legacy of our English heritage, academic caps and gowns have been worn since colonial times," states the E.R. Moore brochure. "By 1885 there was a widespread student movement in America wear caps and gowns at all

Commencement ceremonies.' SYMBOLISM

The academic hood is a symbol of personal achievement and the visual representation of scholastic degree, according to E.R. Moore. The hood that once dressed the head now drapes over the shoulders and down the back. Sherry Morris, supervisor of caps and gowns, said one of the most frequently asked questions is the meaning of the different colors.

"The color of the hood's velvet edging denoted the field of learning. The colors of the satin lining are the school's colors," she said.

The color of the tassel also represents the degree or field of learning. All doctoral graduates receive a short, fat, gold tassel. Other graduates receive tassels matching the velvet on their hoods.

Colors are standard across the nation, but BYU has varied in the color for business graduates.

"Our business students wear a royal blue, whereas across the nation a drab brown is used," Morris said.

TO WALK OR NOT TO WALK While some BYU students look forward to the traditional commencement activities with great anticipation, others choose to forgo them.

Dale Caswell, 22, a junior from Riverside, Calif., majoring in English, looks forward to participating in the graduation ceremony.

"I want to walk for graduation for the same reason I went through graduation in high school," he said. "I kind of like ceremonies.'

Kate Mann, 26, an April 1994 English graduate from Orem, only went through the ceremony because her parents wanted her to. Although she said she would not have participated but for her parents, she now wishes her husband, who has decided not to walk in April, would.

"He thinks graduation ceremony is a huge waste of time and he thought mine was really boring," Mann said. Morris said she sees students from

"Some kids sit here and cry, 'You can't believe what this means to me," she said. "A lot (of graduates) sacrifice years, struggling to make it a reality, and it means the world to them - they wouldn't miss it for the world; others had it handed to them and aren't as grateful."

'Happy Valley?' magazine off to raging start

By MIKE BRADY Universe Staff Writer

Over 250 people crammed into Hanger 18 in Orem Saturday night to hear the sounds of six local bands with diverse styles ranging from rockabilly to hard-core punk rock which helped kick-off "Happy Valley?" a magazine to promote local talent.

The show's intent was to cover the production costs of the first issue of 'Happy Valley?" and get a good readership base started, as well as give the local bands a chance to get some more exposure, said Paul Butterfield, publisher of "Happy Valley?" and show promoter. "The turnout was great tonight and it seems like everyone is having a good time," Butterfield said.

Headlining the show was "The Vickers" whose members include BYU students and whose punk sounds were reminiscent of '80s punk rock. "The Vickers" kept the crowd hopping throughout the night.

Other bands that played include "Pistol Pete," which played its last show, losing a band member to serve an LDS mission, "The Willard Rice Band," "The Shakes," "The Soda Jerks," and "Civil Disobedience." "The Soda Jerks," also comprised

SALT LAKE CITY — The Mormon Church is emergas a player in international assistance projects after cades of standing aloof from outside relief agencies. Over the past 10 years, The Church of Jesus Christ of tter-day Saints has developed a Humanitarian Service ogram to work with foreign and domestic agencies in ipping food, clothing and cash to the disaster-stricken d downtrodden.

forts if it wants a presence in developing nations. forts won't go unnoticed. Over 60 years, the Church is developed an extensive worldwide welfare system of rms, food production facilities, storehouses, cash serves and employment services

"We normally ship (the goods that are donated to us) id they have the capacity to do that themselves," said on Rogers of Catholic Relief Services. "They are more pable than other donors and they can work in coordiation with us.

Rogers described recent LDS shipments of clothes and pod to eastern Europe as highly organized and said the hurch is seeking contacts there to operate relief prorams directly. Launched during the Great Depression, ne LDS welfare program has been primarily a safety et for its members

"(Mormons) always had a policy that was deliberately isular with the thinking that if we take care of our own, 'e will free the resources of other organizations to serve onmembers," said Garth Mangum, an economics and management professor at the University of Utah and coauthor of "The Mormons' War on Poverty."

That doesn't mean Latter-day Saints, while meeting the needs of members, entirely ignored those outside the

In 1907, church members sent a shipment of grain to quake-devastated China. Other disasters have prompted isolated shipments of food and clothing.

Also, Latter-day Saints independent of their church have launched about a dozen or more private charities, such as Deseret International, that focus on development projects in impoverished countries.

Members of those groups can't pin their church's shift in welfare policy on any single event.

And church leaders have said nothing publicly about reasons for the move.

Some see its beginnings in the early 1980s when church leaders allowed missionaries in Southeast Asia to teach refugees how to adapt to western life. It was the 1985 famine in Ethiopia that most

If Jackson is right, the impact on international relief observers see as the turning point in the thinking of church leaders. Many saints wanted to help, but the only charity they knew and trusted was their church, to which they volunteer money and time to maintain the exclusive welfare system.

The Church had contributed to various relief organizations in Ethiopia the year before, but many rank-and-file members wrote letters seeking direction.

"They wanted to give more. We had calls and letters by the hundreds," said Keith McMullin, the church's managing director of welfare services. A churchwide fast specifically to raise money for famine relief in Africa brought in more than $6 million. A national day of fasting raised another $3.8 million.

In addition to aid to Africa, the contributions were used to seed what would become an ongoing program of humanitarian assistance to people outside the fold. McMullin said the program evolved because the church's 9 million members demonstrated they could meet needs outside the church as well as within.

Arkansas falls short in bid for second consecutive national championship

SEATTLE — With its starting point guard on the bench and its greatest coach in the stands, UCLA won its first national championship in 20 years and kept Arkansas from joining the select list of

The top-ranked Bruins won their record 11th NCAA title Monday night with an 89-78 victory that was even more impressive considering senior Tyus Edney was limited to 2 1/2 minutes because of a sprained right wrist.

Ed O'Bannon stepped up as he was supposed to, but so did freshman Toby Bailey and Cameron Dollar, Edney's replacement, and it all meant the first title for the school since 1975, when John Wooden, who sat quietly in the stands of the Kingdome, won the last of 10 in a 12-year span.

For Arkansas, it was the end of a tournament run of close finishes and it ended one game short of becoming the second repeat champion since Wooden's Bruins won seven in a row, ending in

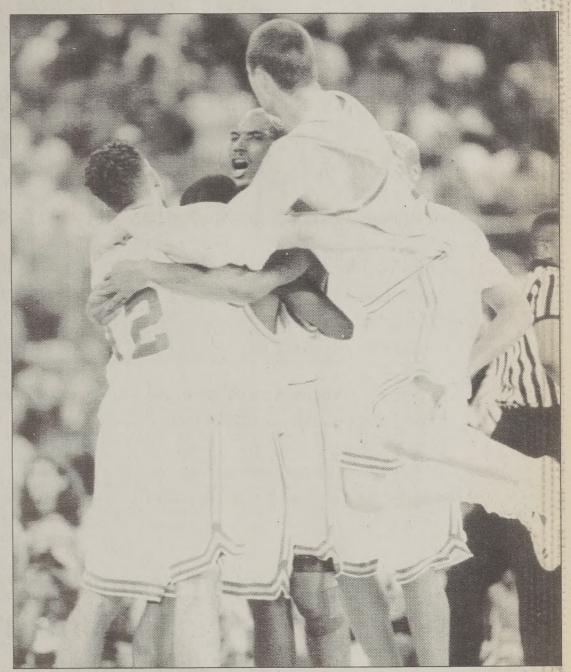

The Razorbacks had come to rely on its great defense and great player, Corliss Williamson, in the second half, but neither was there against UCLA.

O'Bannon scored 30 points and had 16 rebounds in a game that certified his All-America credentials. Bailey, who had struggled to a 1-for-2, two-point outing in the semifinals, finished with 26 points and nine rebounds. And Dollar, the backup point guard who played in the shadow of the lightning quick Edney, came up with eight assists.

Williamson, who was 9-for-12 in the second half of the semifinal win over North Carolina, finished 3-for-16 from the field against the Bruins, including a 1-for-10 effort in the second half. Instead of the Razorbacks swarming and defending as they had all tournament in the latter stages of the game, it was the Bruins who managed to hold Arkansas without a field goal for a 4:47 stretch that ended with Williamson's first basket of the second half with

That made it 77-68 and the Razorbacks were out of the last-minute miracles they had managed in the early rounds.

The Bruins built a 65-53 lead with 11:27 left on a rebound basket by Bailey. Arkansas managed to get within 67-64 on a free throw by Williamson with 5:22 left, but O'Bannon hit a jump hook, Bailey scored on yet another rebound and O'Bannon and Dollar each made two free throws and Bailey scored again and the lead was again 12 with 3:13

Lacrosse's seniors finish with a win MLB teams send replacements packi

By REES THORKELSON Universe Sports Writer

Plagued with inexperience and having to undergo several changes, the BYU lacrosse team finished the league season on a positive note, beating Regis University, 12-4, Saturday night at Helaman Field.

The victory was particularly sweet for four BYU seniors who played their last home game as Cougars. Goalie, Trent Hart; defensemen, Christian Svendson and Darren Greenhalgh; and attacker, Kelli Law, all wrapped up their lacrosse careers

"A few seniors played their last home game," said BYU coach Jason Lamb, "But 95 percent of the team comes back next year.'

BYU dominated Regis University from the beginning, as it took a 5-1 lead into the second half. But the game was not put away until the fourth quarter when the Cougars scored seven goals.

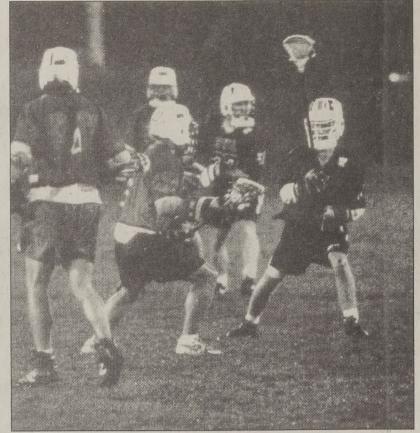

Attáckman Rodman Likes led BYU in scoring with three goals and one assist, while Britt Cornaby had two goals and one assist.

The Cougars, who finished 2-3 in the Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Lacrosse League and 3-5 overall, are pleased with their progress, despite a mediocre season.

"The team in the fall was disorganized and we had a lot of work ahead of us," Lamb said. "This year was a rebuilding year — the program is going to be really strong next year."

Lamb, who took over the reigns as the coach in early January, had only weeks to prepare the young squad.

"This season was tough," Lamb said. "We had to start without a semester of preparation."

RECEIVING END: BYU defenders, left, close in on a Denver University opponent as he receives the ball during the March 22 game at Helaman Field. The BYU lacrosse team won its final match of the season Saturday by a 12-4 margin over Regis University.

Despite the lack of preparation, Lamb said the team had a good year, especially to end it with a win.

The Cougars played several teams very closely, however, including losses to the University of Colorado and the Colorado School of Mines by a combined three goals.

"Those games could have gone either way," Lamb said.

But Lamb is confident things will make a turn for the better. Team captains Likes, Andy Stockman and Brian Rolapp, should provide a strong foundation for next year's team, he

Other Cougars earning high marks were Dawn Tabla who placed second in the shot put (42-11 1/4) and Heather Frushour with a second-place finish in the 1500 (4:41.12), and Jennifer Frazier had a 38-8 1/4 in the triple jump for third place.

Personal bests were also recorded by Elaine Jones in the 100-meter hurdles (15.7); Julie Bennion in the 400meter hurdles (1:04.14); Dawn Tabla in the hammer (146-7); and Laurie Trockel opened her season in the 5000 meters by placing fourth with a personal best of (18:12).

1992 as the only repeat champions since UCLA's streak ended. There have been five other repeaters. Oklahoma State in 1945-46, Kentucky in 1948-49, San Francisco in 1955-56, Cincinnati in 1961-62 and UCLA in 1964-65.

The victory was the 19th straight for UCLA, while the Razorbacks closed the season by winning 15 of 17.

* Edney started the game but played just 2:37 and never returned. His only statistic was one turnover as he booked tentative and rarely let the ball even touch his right hand. Edney had been so impressive in a penetrating performance against Oklahoma State in the semifinals where he scored 21 points and handed out five assists.

A frantic opening four minutes had the Razorbacks up 16-10 but the pace came to a standstill for about three minutes. Bailey hit a 3-pointer and jumper in the lane to cap a 7-0 run that gave the Bruins a 34-26 lead.

The final minute of the first half was a lot like the start as there were four lead changes in that span with freshman. J.R. Henderson's layup with 10 seconds left giving UCLA the 40-39 halftime lead.

"I worked out a deal that if the opposing school would pay to get here, we would take care of the rest," Valentine said. "Once they got here, we had many of the local car dealers that would supply vans for transportation and local folks would put them in homes and feed them."

Little by little her strategy evolved into putting the teams up in local hotels. This was done with the understanding that the other team do the same when the Cougars came to town, thus saving on the budget allotted to BYU women's tennis.

Valentine also was a major factor in what is known today as the NCAA National Championships. Valentine came up with the idea, and hosted a 6team tournament on the BYU campus, in which the top six teams in the nation competed for a national championship. Nike picked it up an made it into an eight-team tournament and later into the 16-team tournament that it is today. In the process of all this, Valentine created a very respected name for herself in collegiate tennis.

"I can't think of anyone that I respect more than Ann Valentine," said University of Colorado Rosemary who served with Valentine on the Intercollegiate Tennis Association executive board. "She is one of the Valentine was thrust into the light of a role model, near the beginning of her coaching career, when she became part of the original ITA executive board and its board of directors, the governing body that sets the decisions for ITA tennis in the United States. She also served as the co-chair of the ethics and infractions committee and currently serves as the chair of the

"Ann has been involved in many of the important decisions that are made in collegiate tennis," Benjamin said. She is well respected not only coaching ability, but her intelligence."

Year-in and year-out, of all BYU athletics, women's tennis has faced the toughest schedule, having 15 to 20 of its matches against top-25 teams. After facing the Cougars, the opposition usually gains respect for the gentle, yet highly competitive Valentine.

"Ann is one of the greatest tennis coaches in the nation," said Andy Brandy, coach of the top-ranked Gators of Florida. "Everyone respects her very highly for having one of the top programs in the nation.'

"He's got blisters and seems to have aches and pains all over his body," Osborne said. "His wrist is still not healed 100 percent, but it was important to have some wins on this trip.

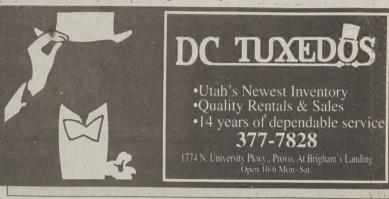

With WAC Championships less than a month away, it is important for BYU to play well in its three remaining dual matches.

We're definitely not peaking, so top teams in the WAC.

we're not peaking too soon," Osborne

"This season we've beaten the teams we weré supposed to beat, but have not done well against teams that are just a little better or even with us."

That might change after last week's road trip, though. Osborne said even though BYU lost to Stanford, it gave BYU confidence that it can compete with top-caliber competition. BYU will need that confidence Saturday when it hosts New Mexico, one of the HOT SHOTS: Members of a California firefighting crew work on a fire in Leavenworth, Wash., last August. Several BYU students fight fires during their summer vacations and say despite the dangers associated, they enjoy the excitement, pay and teamwork involved.

BYU students fight summer fires

By DANIEL DAHL Universe Staff Writer

Stranded in a small Yellowstone meadow with fire roaring on all sides may not be everyone's picture of the ideal summer job, but it's just what some BYU students are looking for.

Chris Zweifel, a senior from Malin, Ore., majoring in civil engineering, fought forest fires for two summers and got caught in some pretty hot sit-

While fighting the Yellowstone Park fires in 1988, Zweifel said his unit was called off the fire one day due to high winds. The firefighters retreated to a meadow and before long they were surrounded on all sides by the raging fire. Helicopters had to dump water to clear a passage for Zweifel and his unit, he said.

The passage was still smoking and hot, so we double timed it through the hot area to safety," he said.

Janae Dixon, a senior from Pocatello, Idaho, majoring in wildlife biology, said that despite the dangers, there are at least three reasons she

She said her job is hard work, but 'it's exciting and lots of fun.'

Dixon also fights fires because the pay is good and she has made strong friendships with other firefighters in her crew, she said.

Because the job has been a good experience, she intends to fight fires in future summers.

If a student is interested in getting a summer job as a firefighter, Mike Gates, a junior from Holden, Utah, says the best way to obtain a firefighting job is through local government

He suggests contacting the Bureau of Land Management, the National Forest Service or the National Parks

Gates has fought fires in Utah, Nevada, Idaho and Wyoming and said he enjoys the job despite the dangers associated with it.

Dixon has encountered at least one other small disadvantage while fighting fires. She says her mother worries. "I have to call her every time I get

Many stopped to speak with Jean Bertin, two of their four young children, her parents and two brothers. Several relatives collapsed in front of Justice Minister Joseph Exume was among those who waited in line. He bowed his head before the coffin, but did not speak to family members seated nearby

Several alleged targets were among the mourners.

"It is disagreeable to know you are n, 35, was shot in the face on a condemned to death," said lawyer treet a week ago. She was Carl Labossier. He was among Aristide opponents, including Bertin, who formed a new political party just days before her killing.

U.S. officials notified the Aristide government after learning of the hit list. Haitian authorities said they warned Mrs. Bertin and offered her security. They said she rejected the Bertin's husband said his wife never told him of any government warning or offer of security. She repeatedly was warned by friend that she was Aristide has asked for FBI assistance in tracking down the killers and promised President Clinton when he was in Haiti Friday that Bertin's killers would be brought to justice.

The killing raised questions about security in Haiti at a time when the U.S. military was handing over command of its mission in Haiti to the United Nations, U.S. forces came ashore Haiti in September to oust a military regime and restore Aristide to Bertin, an expert in international law, made many enemies with her outspoken support for those who ousted Aristide in a September 1991 coup. She opposed the U.S. intervention.

Some people accuse Bertin's fellow coup supporters in the killing, allegedly to discredit Aristide.

Since a timetable was announced for June 4 legislative elections, a violent wave has been testing Haiti's fledgling democracy.

There have been rash of armed roband executions of alleged thieves by neighborhood crowd; a pro-Aristide lawmaker and a militant member of a peasant movement were murdered.
